Methodology

Throughout the year, VerdictSearch strives to report as many jury verdicts as possible from around the nation. In addition to accepting submissions from attorneys, we develop leads by scouring the courts, searching the Internet and other news sources, such as American Lawyer Media publications, and cultivating relationships with law firms. Our exhaustive efforts allow us to present this list with every confidence in its accuracy. However, if we left anyone out, we apologize. Verdicts are ranked by gross award and do not reflect reductions for comparative negligence; remittitur, additurs and reversals; and attorney fees and costs (unless awarded by the jury). In situations where awards are automatically trebled by statute, the trebled amount is listed. In addition to what is on our chart, more details about these cases can be obtained by purchasing our Top 100 book, which will contain full reports on each case, including judge, facts of the case, causes of action and defenses, a detailed account of injuries and damages, a breakdown of the award, expert witnesses, jury composition and other trial details.
